

We saw a strange sight on South Walnut street this morning—two men in overalls and caps, one of them waddling down the thoroughfare. They looked like misshapen ants, without guns or armor.

And they couldn't possibly be anything but the new international harvesters or company cotton-pickers. That's what they were.

One goes to Alston Foster, Hope, and the other to the Cox brothers of Fulton, both well known planters.

The machines are made in Memphis. An international harvester factory man I met on the train early this month told me that the cotton-picker is only one of several types on the H.C. line which are being manufactured in the new Memphis plant. He said the company has transferred its hay machinery operations there also.

Not since the invention of the cotton gin has a new product stirred up the agricultural world like the coming of the mechanical cotton-picker. It is supposed to signal an economic revolution on the farms of the South, with fewer people getting out more farm production, and reducing the over-reaching changes in population here.

Regardless of consequences the mechanical cotton-picker is welcomed by the South. Nor will there be the dire consequences that some are predicting. People have always found something else to do when a machine replaced them at back-breaking labor—and with increasing prosperity. Furthermore, you can't have diversification of agriculture and industry without diversifying the talents of your people at the same time.

House Leaders, Slashing ERP, Give a Boost to Stalin
By JAMES THRASHER

A short news dispatch recently, based on a Moscow broadcast, announced that the Soviet government had decided to cut in two the balance of payments from Hungary and Rumania.

The announcement came four days after the U. S. House of Representatives had decided to cut the requested appropriation for European aid by more than a quarter.

That Russian policy is taking a new tack. Earlier Moscow had reduced the demand for Finnish reparations and had raised wages and increased rations in the Soviet zone of Germany.

In other words, Uncle Joe Stalin has put on a broad smile and is trying to look even more benevolent than benevolent Uncle Sam.

And it must be said that the House action gave Uncle Joe a brilliant assist in the play. The raises again the question of whether the House leaders had the least idea of what they were doing when they put through that cut or if, indeed, they comprehend its effect even now.

The average European cannot be expected to know the House and the cut. He doesn't know that the slash was largely the work of John Taber, perennial penny-pincher and head of the House Appropriations Committee, and of Speaker Joseph Martin and Majority Leader Charles McNary.

He doesn't know that the vote was close, that many members were absent, and that a sizable group fought hard against the reduction to the end. He doesn't know that among the supporters were many whose chief distinction is a willingness to jump through the hoop when the House leaders crack the whip.

What the average European probably thinks—and has a right to—is that the House is an elected group truly representing the wishes of the people. He probably thinks that the American people now wish to hedge on their promises of help, while the Russian government is backing up its promises of communist utopia with some tangible benefits.

It would seem that Messrs. Taber, Martin, McNary and the rest are as misinformed about the wishes of the American people as the average European. They are talking about "for it has been shown clearly and repeatedly that the majority of Americans favor an aid program substantial enough to put Europe on its feet and get it off America's back."

Maybe the gentlemen didn't really think much about Europe, or about our government's problems there. Perhaps they just figured that this is an election year, and that a gesture of economy ought to be a good thing. So they cut ERP by $1,745,000,000. That was about an average week's military expenditure by this country in World War II.

Maybe these gentlemen should be reminded again that we are fighting a tough little blood war to save freedom in Europe for the sake of our own freedom. We may not be losing that war today, but we aren't winning it. The vital political battle for Germany seems to be going against us. A friendly French government, which depends much on us, is under attack from two sides.

The flush of gratitude and enthusiasm for the Marshall Plan has subsided. Europe is waiting to see the promises fulfilled. Meanwhile our opponent, though he may lie low at times, never rests from his drive to communize Europe. In this atmosphere the gentlemen of the House, through innocence, ignorance or malice, have given their country a major setback in its fight for freedom.

European War Refugees Can Now Enter U. S.

By VINCENT BURKE

Washington, June 26 —(UP)—The warring of an army of 200,000 European war refugees will enter the United States late in August, government officials said today.

The vast immigration of displaced persons will continue for about two years under terms of a bill signed into law by President Truman late yesterday. The United States plans to provide 18 ships to the international refugee organization for about two years under terms of a bill signed into law by President Truman late yesterday. The United States plans to provide 18 ships to the international refugee organization for about two years under terms of a bill signed into law by President Truman late yesterday.

The president, who repeatedly had asked Congress for legislation enabling a substantial number of DP's to settle here, said he was signing the bill "with very great reluctance." He denounced it as "flagrant discrimination" against Jews and Catholics, and appealed to Congress to correct its "injustices" at the next session.

Government officials, who have been studying the DP problem, said that under the new law fewer Jews will be admitted to this country than would have come in under the former quota system.

Though about one out of every four persons in DP camps is Jewish, they said, only 10,000 to 15,000 Jews will be among the 250,000 new immigrants.

The reason for this, the officials said, is a provision in the law that DP's must have fled to Germany, Austria or Italy with their families in 1935 to be eligible for admission. Most Jews arrived after that date.

Mr. Truman was particularly critical of this section of the new law. He assailed it as a "device used to discriminate against Jewish displaced persons."

"This brutal fact," he said, "can not be obscured by the maze of technicalities in the bill or by the protestations of some of its sponsors."

During the past two years, 35,000 homeless Europeans have taken refuge in the United States under the quota system. About 22,000 of these were Jews.

Charges that the law is anti-Semitic were promptly and emphatically denied by the State Department.

The priority given to displaced persons who are natives of the Baltic countries of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania. Critics of the measure claim that these countries are largely Jewish.

Rector Police Chief Fatally Wounded

Rector, June 26 —(AP)—Police Chief Tom Green, 58, was fatally wounded with his own pistol last night, and murder charges were to be filed today against two brothers, held in connection with the shoot ing.

Clay County Sheriff B. O. Dalton arrested Darrell Ogles, 22, and Leon Ogles, 23, both of Marmaduke, Ark., after Green and Night Marshal John Joiner, 50, were wounded. He said the Ogles brothers were charged with assaulting and killing before Green died, but that charges of first degree murder would be filed today.

Sheriff Dalton reported Green and Joiner arrested Leon Ogles at a rooming house where he had been creating a disturbance, and as they were taking him to jail, Darrell Ogles approached and grabbed Green's pistol.

Dalton reported Green was shot four times before Joiner shot and slightly wounded Darrell Ogles. Leon Ogles then grabbed Joiner's gun and beat him over the head with it, the sheriff said.

Green died a short time later in a Paragould hospital.

Holy Land Under Uneasy Truce

Jews have been more successful militarily. They have kept their boundaries inviolate, overrun western Galilee, beat off Syrian and Lebanese invasion in north, pushed into Arab triangle, captured Egyptian positions in south, not lost single settlement in Negeb.

Time is important Jewish ally. During truce Jews will consolidate and train military forces, make purchases abroad, erect new settlements at strategic points, expand and streamline government services.

Jews' military record is more than matched by speed in setting up Israel's government and training it into operation.

Greater stumbling block to peace than existence of Abdullah is determined never to give it up. UN wants it internationalized.

Israel's only defeat—Kfar Etzion, Jerusalem's Old City, Sheikh Jarrah, Latrun—were all inflicted by Arab Legion. Outside the Legion, Arab war potential is weak.

Strongest hope for peace is direct negotiations between Israel and Trans-Jordan. Only two states which have scored victories.

Map above shows how opposing Israeli and Arab forces lined up as truce took effect. It also highlights some of the factors that will decide whether the uneasy truce can be solidified into permanent peace.

Jail Parents for Punishment to Child

San Francisco, June 25—(UP)—A young mother admitted today that she locked up her five-year-old child in a foul-smelling, dark closet for more than 24 hours because she was "full of mischief" and "spilled things."

Juvenile officers yesterday rescued Sharon Stewart, naked and half-dressed, from her closet prison while her mother pleaded at the beach and her father was off on a fishing trip. The girl said she had been there since Monday morning.

Later, police arrested her mother, Mrs. Esther Stewart, 29, and her father Robert 32. They were taken to jail on charges of cruelty and mistreatment of a child. Stewart, a city fireman, was suspended from the department.

Their other two children, Robert Michael, 7, and Judy 3, were taken from them and placed in the juvenile detention home.

During "the worst case of deliberate neglect and punishment in my experience," Probation Officer Arthur Upton said juvenile authorities intend "to take Sharon away from the parents permanently and to take the other two children away from them temporarily."

When officers arrived at the home on the complaint of neighbors who heard the child's cries, they found her 7-year-old grandfather, Narciso Celino, who said the girl was not there. Hearing muffled sounds of sobbing the officers entered a room where they saw a bureau barricaded a door.

"The door is locked," Upton said. "No it isn't," said a small voice. "Here I am."

Upton pulled the bureau away as well as a number of children's clothes that had been stuffed into the bottom crack of the closet door.

When he opened the door, Sharon crawled out, naked and covered with her own filth. Her matted hair hung wildly over her tear-stained face. Her body was chafed and red. She had a minor infection on her heel and four of her teeth were missing.

"Mommy put me in the closet," she said. "No, I want naughty."

"Why did your mommy put you in the closet?" Upton asked. "Because."

"Did you tell your mommy not to put you in the closet?"

"Yes."

"I had breakfast today," she continued. "Mommy gave me macaroni salad and salami and milk. I didn't have any breakfast yesterday, but I had lunch — milk. No dinner last night."

At San Francisco hospital, attendants gave her a bath and washed her hair. She was not in serious condition. She weighed 30 pounds, about 15 pounds less than the average for her age. Doctors said she was suffering from malnutrition.

The girl also told her mother had "hand-cuffed" her to her crib at home.

Mrs. Stewart said she had kept the child in a closet three or four times before.

"I was just punishing my child in my own way," she said.

Stewart denied knowing the child had been put in the closet. He admitted, however, that she had been punished in that manner "15 or 20 times" during the past year.

Neighbors said Mrs. Stewart treated her other children "very well."

Not that competition in past parades hasn't been tough. Miss Walker lost out in both the "Dixie Belle" and "Maid of Cotton" contests before becoming "Miss America."

Some think the things getting out of hand but the enthusiastic sponsors are likely to sound off with something like this:

"Cocaine might have had the Nile river situation sewed up but then she never docked at Memphis on the Mississippi."

Today's heat won't last forever. And if Old Ma Nature does her stuff on schedule, there'll come a day when you'll be worried about ice on your windshield instead of listening to it tinkle in your cooling drink. But you needn't worry if you have this new de-icing windshield glass, developed during the war. Violet Valencia, in Toledo, O., shows how the heat-conducting glass clears the windshield of a thick ice crust, which still coats the car's body.

Illness From Dog Ticks Increasing

Dog ticks can make you sick, states Home Demonstration Agent, Lorraine Blackwood. A condition known as tick paralysis is becoming more common. In a majority of cases, the dog tick is to blame. Symptoms resemble infantile paralysis. There is a temporary loss of muscle and weight balance. The victim is unable to stand without support. He has difficulty in grasping objects. There is a general weakness in both lower and upper extremities.

In some cases of tick paralysis, the legs become completely paralyzed. Infantile paralysis is usually the first thing thought of and the doctor usually starts supportive treatment for that disease. When patient does not improve in due time, other causes are looked for. In the case of a 4-year-old girl, symptoms persisted for six days under treatment of infantile paralysis. On further inspection of the child, an embedded tick was found and removed from the scalp on the seventh day. She almost immediately recovered after the tick was removed. Through questioning, the doctor learned that the little girl had a pet dog that was known by the family to have had many ticks on his body.

Soon after the tick embeds itself in the flesh, weakness and paralysis follow, and continue until the tick is extracted. Scientists have found that this species of tick is usually a female filled with eggs. When it buries itself in the flesh, it begins to feed on the blood of the person. At the same time, it injects a powerful toxin which affects the nervous system of the individual and causes paralysis.

Lorraine Blackwood explains that ticks should be removed with caution from a person. They should never be squeezed out. To loosen their hold, place a drop of kerosene, ether or chloroform over the protruding part.

Nearly every farm has a pet dog. They should frequently be examined for ticks, kept clean and sprayed regularly with a disinfectant or germicide, says Lorraine Blackwood. Household pets may be washed or sprayed with not more than a 2 per cent solution of kerosene or other disinfectant. Become conscious of animal source of infection. Pets are a needed part of every household, but they should not be neglected.

Arkansas News

Little Rock, June 24—(AP)—The summer recess of the Arkansas Supreme Court will stay the death sentence of Mizzell Palmer, Pulaski county Negro, at least three months.

Palmer, convicted in Pulaski Circuit Court on a charge of rape, was sentenced to die July 9, but his attorney, Griffin Smith, Jr., said an appeal to the supreme court would be filed July 5.

The appeal would automatically stay the execution, and the high court for Betsy's pleasure? He went on, "Tonight I decided I must tell you. I was a selfish guy when I married you. I wanted you, Jess, wanted you so desperately that I refused to face the fact that I could never make you happy. I know now that I was wrong and I know the motive which prompted you to marry me, Jess. I understand exactly why you did."

"You know?" She kept her voice steady with an effort. "He nodded. You pitied me."

"You have a tender heart. I've watched you since I came back. In spite of your desire to go away, you've stayed, helping me, helping Lucy."

"I feel responsible for what happened to you."

"Why should you?" "Because I influenced her to change. Because I set her a bad example when I treated my own marriage vows so lightly."

"You don't need to tell me about that," said Tom roughly. "I want to tell you. Please, Tom, listen this once."

"I thought I was in love with another man. I thought myself cheated because I had to endure a few petty hardships here which I never knew at home. I was selfish, opinionated. The man I met flattered me and made me think I was abused. He told me that nobody loved forever and so I should feel no guilt when I ceased to love the man I had married. I was unhappy and lonely. I listened."

Tom rose. He crossed the room and stood beside Betsy's crib for a moment. Then he came back and stood beside the bed. He said in a low, impersonal tone, "I think I know what you're trying to say, Jess—that you've felt a strong obligation to stay here with me. You've stayed because you felt it your duty to stay."

"You think—" Her voice broke. "I don't want your pity." She gave a little cry and slipped out of bed and stood beside him. "Is that what you really believe, Tom—that I pity you?"

"What else?" he asked, and made no move toward her. "This," she said brokenly. "I went away with you that June night to please you. I loved you. I want to tell you—try to make you understand. I want everything clear between us, now and always. I never loved David Gregory. I never loved any man but the man I married—you, Tom."

He caught her hands and drew her to him. He said, "Jess, my home will be an empty place without you. You must know that. But I have so little to offer. I didn't come to be Jessica."

"To be Jessica?" Jessica laughed softly. "She felt Tom's arms tighten about her. She lifted her face. She said, "You don't have to beg for what belongs to you. Do you, Tom?"

Bolshevist Meet to Plan New Treachery Is Bringing Fresh Unity to Free Nations

By DEWITT MACKENZIE, AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Out of the fire comes the steel; out of the trials and dangers imposed by the Bolshevist drive to conquer the globe there undoubtedly is emerging a new unity among the free nations.

By treachery, trickery and aggression the Reds enslaved Eastern Europe before a trusting world as a whole was awake to this threat from one of the major allies. However, with the full awakening the Democratic nations are solidifying in a manner which couldn't have been foreseen. The Communist scheme of breeding division and discord is back-firing.

We see this in the fact that while idealists strove for generations to form a United States of Europe, the Bolshevists unwittingly and unwillingly have set such a union well on its way in Western Europe in the brief period since the war. Moreover that's only half the story, for the Soviet policy of aggression has driven Western Europe and America together in a manner which couldn't have been foreseen by any stretch of imagination.

The nucleus of a possible United States of Europe is the recently formed Western European Union. This comprises Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. The alliance is economic, military and political. Other countries of Western Europe are debating affiliation.

Today Washington is hard at work on ways and means of associating America with this new European bloc which gives real promise of expanding. Conversations between the union and the state department are expected to take place soon. Meantime the Marshall Plan is swinging into action and is further uniting the nations of Western Europe together for mutual advantage.

Part of the Red scheme is to drive the Americans, British and French out of Berlin which lies in the heart of the Soviet zone. This is indicated clearly enough in the latest Soviet move of halting railway transport from the West into Berlin, thus cutting off for some 3,000,000 people apart from what the Western Allies move by air. The Reds, in order to cause suffering, also have severed a great deal of the electric current which supplies Berlin.

However, General Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, has declared succinctly and without emotion that the Russians "cannot drive us out of Berlin by force and is sure to give up."

Unfortunately the only way they can put on pressure is to make the Germans suffer.

There Russian tactics are, as remarked in a previous column, largely defensive. That is to say, their offensive has bogged down and they are trying to bolster it. But their tricks have lost their magic, and world Democracy is uniting against further aggression.

"O'Mahoney said it is 'doubtful' whether Dewey could have carried the convention if President Truman had not made his recent cross-country trip and 'dramatically called the attention of the republic to the failures of Congress.'"

President Truman was officially silent on the Republican ticket he expects to face this fall. But Sen. James E. Murray, D. Mont., said after a White House visit that the president "seems to think that Dewey's nomination was a triumph for the 'conservative interests.'"

Baker Favorite in National Decathlon

Bloomfield, N.J., June 26—(AP)—A University of Arkansas track and field iron man was one of the favorites in the field of 22 athletes seeking Olympic honors in the national AAU decathlon championship beginning here today.

He is Charles Guy Baker, who holds the distinction of having defeated the defending champion New York University's Moon Montecine. Baker accomplished the feat in the Kansas relay this spring. Baker, who has shown considerable improvement in practice since his college triumph, however, was not in the best of physical condition as he came here for the Olympic tryouts. He has been troubled by a summer cold.

Starved for Love
"And the catch in all of this is that I really think that my husband still loves me, but he doesn't think it worth while to tell me so. He expects me to take it for granted as long as I feed me on fillet mignon and croques Suzette, and he never dreams that I am as starved for love as any beggar is for food."

"What's the matter with husbands? Are they just plain dumb about love? Or do they just don't ever get so old that they doesn't want to be treated like a Lady Love? Or do we wives just expect too much of our husbands? Or do men just naturally crave young women? Thousands of us wives, who are married to human icicles, would like to know the answers to these questions."

It is easy enough to explain why technically good husbands, meaning thereby husbands who are as domestic as the house cat, and who never raise their hands to a woman in anger, but kindness, as the old melodramas used to say, treat their wives as they do. It is because the great majority of men are not sentimental by nature and while they nerve themselves up to putting on a romantic act during the days of courtship, they drop it like a hot cake at the altar. They have told Mary Ann that they love her, and they have carried her to prove it, and thank goodness that ordeal is over for good.

But women never understand this. They want to be treated as brides when they are 30. It doesn't suffice for their husbands to prove their devotion by deeds. What every wife craves is for her husband to keep up a perpetual courtship, and this not being in the nature of the brute explains why there are so many disgruntled wives.

Scott is a member of the aviation subcommittee of the interstate and foreign commerce committee in Congress.

The newly designated national chairman is not a personal intimate of Governor Dewey but they were acquainted. In 1946 Scott managed the campaign of all six Republican candidates for Congress in Philadelphia and all were elected.

Born November 11, 1900, in Fredericksburg, Va., Scott was graduated from Randolph Macon college in 1919 and from the University of Virginia Law School in 1923.

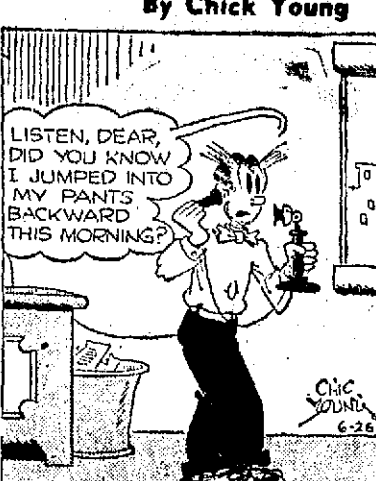

He practiced law in Philadelphia before entering Congress. He is married and the father of one daughter.

A series of conferences between Dewey and Republican leaders last night preceded the choice of Scott to succeed Carroll Reece of Tennessee as head of the committee.

Replaced by Senator Edward H. Martin and former Senator Joseph Grundy.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 26 (AP)—Fritz McKale, University of Arizona baseball coach, an old western Michigan college boy is a stickler for the proper behavior of a club although he has some unorthodox theories about how to play the game. A few years ago Fritz had a bull-headed catcher who liked nothing better than capturing pop flies, no matter where they were going. The big husky kid could run right over anyone who got in his way and was a positive danger to the pitchers and infielders who tried for high ones. One day McKale had a high fly near the first base coaching box and the catcher went charging after it. The first sacker, who only had to move a couple of steps, shouted "I'll take it." Without even slowing down, the catcher bolted. McKale said, "You ain't got it." And he took it. McKale met him at the dugout steps, his eyes glittering with anger. "What's the matter coach?" asked the kid. "You made me out," Yes, admitted Fritz. "But I'll be damned if I'll have bad English and bad baseball on my team at the same time."

Branca Studies Fault of All Hitters

By CARL LUNDQUIST

New York, June 26. — (UP)—There aren't any interesting telephone numbers in Ralph Branca's "Little Black Book," but what he has in it about National League batters would be juicy gossip at any pitcher's tea-party.

Branca, the fast-fingered right handed ace of the Brooklyn pitching staff, has the weaknesses of every opposing batter catalogued and what is more important, he can hit them what they can't hit.

He demonstrated that anew last night when he rifled his way to a 3 to 2 triumph over the Cardinals at Brooklyn, winning his seventh straight game and his ninth of the season.

What makes his mark remarkable was that just a few weeks ago he was considered "all washed up" because the brain that went with his arm, had been traded to Boston. He held on to the job, kept improving, even when Dodger for times reached low ebb. Last night's victory, his most important, ended a three-game losing streak.

The Cardinals, who were out of an intentional pass and scattered seven hits, one a homer by Ron Norton. Marv Ruckley's single, a triple by Billy Cox and Jackie Robinson's double in the third gave Brooklyn a 2 to 0 lead it never relinquished.

The Braves again went a game and a half ahead of the second place Cardinals by rapping out a 2 to 1 victory over the Pirates at Boston. Warren Spahn coasted to his sixth victory as Jim Russell, Tommy Holmes and Alvin Dark hit homers and Spahn hit himself of two doubles.

The Giants got three-hit pitching from Ray Poff, and defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 1, highlighting their victory with a triple seal by Willard Marshall, Sid Gordon and Bill Rigney with Marshall on the scoring end. John Mize hit his 15th home run.

At Philadelphia, Dutch Leonard shaded Hank Borowy in a duel to give the Phils a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Cubs. Dick Sider's double and a single by Don Ennis put over the marginal run for the Phils.

Hal Newhall was tagged for homers by Joe DiMaggio and Johnny Lindell but was otherwise invincible as the Tigers topped the Yankees, 4 to 2 at Detroit. Pat Mullin led Detroit with a double and two singles.

The Athletics regained second place when Joe Coleman turned in an eight-hit, 4 to 1 victory over the White Sox and gave himself the runs he needed with a two-run double in the second. It was Coleman's 8th straight victory and he missed a shutout only because Pay Servey homered.

Washington retarded the leading Indians at Cleveland, 3 to 2 when Pitcher Bob Lemon's wild throw on a double play ball enabled Pitcher Early Wynn of the Senators to drive in the tying and winning runs with his third single. It was Lemon's sixth defeat against 10 victories.

Pitcher Byron Stephens picked an opportune time to get his first hit of the season, a grand slam double which gave him a 9 to 6 triumph at the Browns topped the Red Sox at Boston. Fern Stenehals batted in five of Boston's runs with a homer and single and Les Moss of a three-run homer for St. Louis.

Legion Team Shuts Out Magnolia

The American Legion Junior baseball boys continued their winning ways yesterday afternoon downing Magnolia there by a 4 to 0 score to remain undefeated this season.

Mitch LaGrone turned in a fine hurling job and received flawless support from the field. Sam Westbrook headed the hitters with a double and a triple and Charles Wilson slapped out a triple with one on.

The Magnolia boys will come to Hope for a return game at 3 p.m. Wednesday afternoon.

Infidel Practice

One reason for the success of the Southern Cal ball team is that Coach Sam Barry can get his boys out for a game every Saturday. The year around. The Trojans have won 12 games, each starting against a major and Pacific Coast League opposition while Eastern clubs still are snowbound. Michigan State's baseball team still are burned up about the Southern school coach, also a major league scout, who tried to sign up one of the Spartan players after the teams met this spring. The Vermont Northern College, already wrong with Eastern colleges, likely will be outlawed by the National Collegiate AA.

Cool Off, Pop

Wally, son of Sr., father of the Southern California pitcher, is a former professional player and umpire who was noted for his coolness under fire. But when young Wally pitched, his dad can't still walk every five minutes.

Louis Insists He Is Through With Fighting

By TED SMITS

New York, June 26 (AP)—Joe Louis' proud reign as heavyweight boxing champion of the world is ending — by the only man who could end it, Joe Louis himself.

Flashing 11 years of savagery that brought him 52 knockouts in 61 fights, Louis stretched out Jersey Joe Walcott on the hot canvass of Yankee Stadium in the eleventh round last night.

His revenge, secure, his spirits soothed, he said he was quitting. This created confusion as great as when Gene Tunney retired undefeated in 1926.

Walcott himself, Gus Lesnevich and Ezzard Charles crowded up as Sol Strauss, acting head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, said he would not on a series of fights to determine the successor.

Against Louis Walcott sidestepped and danced through 10 rounds just as successfully as he did last December when Louis made his eighth and last fight, a 15-round decision.

Then Jersey Joe made the mistake in the eleventh of trying to mix it at the rope. He had been told not to do it. The champion's double play ball flashed as old, right and left, against Walcott's head and body.

Walcott went down flat, struggled up to his knees, almost rose at nine, fell again and was still on his hands and knees when the fight was over, with only four seconds more to go in the round. There was a great surge to the ringside, and an excited roar from the crowd.

"For my mother this is for her," Louis said, "my last fight."

Louis said, Later he said he would enter politics.

"I'll be active in this year's presidential campaign," he declared, adding that he would announce next week whom he would support.

Louis went out at 34 years of age as one of the greatest of champions. He had held the title longer than anyone else — 11 years and 105 days. He defended it more often — 25 times. He earned more money in the ring — $3,365,000. That does not even count movie, radio, and television rights.

There were boss for the slow, cautious ways things went last night. Referee Frank Pillemer kept urging Walcott to get in and fight. Afterward Jersey Joe said "this bounding bothered me." It caused me to hang my plans."

Frank Pillemer kept his left hand on the ropes and his right hand on the back of the champion's left eye. In the third round Walcott even floored Louis for a count of one. If this had been a ten-round fight, instead of a 15-round fight, the decision would have been the official card.

For at the end of ten rounds, Pillemer scored five or Louis, two for Walcott and three even. Judge Jack O'Sullivan scored five for Walcott, four for Louis, and one even. Judge Harold Barnes gave six to Walcott, three to Louis, with two even. That would have been a two to one vote in favor of Walcott. The Associated Press card had each winning five rounds.

Truman Sees It All by Television

Washington, June 25 (UP)—President Truman witnessed the nomination of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey by television.

Mr. Truman sat in his study at the White House and watched Dewey's Frank Pillemer kept urging Walcott to get in and fight. Afterward Jersey Joe said "this bounding bothered me." It caused me to hang my plans."

Babe Zaharias, Patty Berg in Finals

Chicago, June 26 (AP)—Two of feminine golf's greatest performers — Babe Zaharias and Patty Berg — today met for the first time in a match play with the 19th women's Western open golf title at stake.

They have matched strokes in many a medal play tournament, but this is the first time they have collided in match play.

In their 36-hole title battle over Skyrack Country Club course, Mrs. Zaharias will be striving for her fourth Western open crown and Miss Berg will be gunning for her third.
